

Inside Your Congress

Bad Strategy, Mr. Reuther
—by—
SAMUEL B. PETTENGILL
"The Gentleman from Indiana"

It is hinted that union leaders disapproved as to the wisdom of the automobile strike; that a struggle for personal power is going on behind the scenes. In any event, the strike appears to be badly timed. Here are some reasons:

First: If the strikers had waited until next spring when General Motors had gone into high volume production (which reduces unit costs) the need for a price rise to cover wage increases would be less, and the automobile companies might then have seen their way clear to make wage boosts higher than the 10 percent they have offered. As President Truman said: "What can be paid today when we are on the threshold of postwar production will be different from what can be paid next year and the year after when markets have been established and earnings have become apparent."

Second: For the balance of 1945, the auto companies are subject to an excess profits tax running up to 85.5 percent. But this will be repealed, and other corporation taxes reduced beginning January 1st. From the tax standpoint, the union leaders have called the strike at the best possible time for their opponents.

Again, the strike was called while the most disastrous political defeat the C. I. O. U. A. W. have had is still in the public's mind. In the most highly unionized city in the country, one of their own officials, Frankenstein, was badly defeated for mayor. Not only did his opponent carry the white collar wards 2 to 1, but Frankenstein lost voting districts which were heavily C. I. O. This indicates that a lot of their members and wives are getting tired of being pushed around. In addition, Uncle Dan Tobin of the A. F. of L. Teamsters Union, says 50,000 A. F. of L. members in Detroit voted to defeat the C. I. O. entry. The activities of a multitude of left-wing groups showed that there are in the Detroit area more communist organizations than all Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions, Exchange and other Service Clubs combined.

The U. A. W. C. I. O. goes into the strike with only $4,000,000 in the bank. With a quarter million

A WELCOME REVISION

New postal regulations permit-ing larger packages to be sent to Army personnel overseas will be a welcome change. Families and friends of such men will appreciate the opportunity to increase the supplies of comforts sent, and it doubtless will be a factor in the morale of the recipients. The parcels, however, must be requested
by the soldier.

The new limits permit an 11-pound parcel which shall not be more than 42 inches long or more than 72 inches in combined length and girth. The old limits of five-pound parcels and not longer than 15 inches nor more than 36 inches in combined length and girth still apply to men in the Navy, Coast Guard and Marine Corps, but these do not require a request from the service men.

Since it is necessary for armed forces to be on duty overseas, it is to be regretted that the rules
could not have been made uniform. But this liberalization may have the way for others.

TROUBLE IN TOYLAND

It looks as if Junior is going to have to put up with another ardboard and wood Christmas.
Peace did not come in time, it seems, for Santa to reconvert to metal and rubber playthings.

Taken showings of wheel toys,
electric trains and mechanical models only will make parents
the objects of leading questions in the part of the offspring. Only a trickle of bicycles and tricycles is expected and doll carriages will be few and hard to find.

Manufacturers are doing their best and they promise a glittering array of vehicles and gadgets for the Christmas of 1946. Such things as shortages, quotas and reconversion, however, are just so many words to junior, who has been told that the tin toys
went to war and that the war now is over.

Plastic playthings may save the day this year. They are expected to reach the stores in some quantity. The youngsters who find them in their stockings, or who spy under the tree some of the colorful wooden ones, probably will be promptly pacified. Next year parents will need fewer explanations and more money.

Congress is described as being angered by increasing strikes, but it is expected to resist the temptation to request the agitators to take off their glasses.

New machine washes dishes in one compartment, clothes in another. If the old man finds pieces of glass in his shirts, will this be purely coincidental?

Machine has been invented
which dispels fog but installation in the nation's capital will await invention of a machine to eliminate red tape.

A scientist says atom bombs will be produced at a cost of twenty cents, at which figure even white collar workers could afford one.

Postwar prosperity is now being pursued, with most persons convinced that there will be more pleasure in the possession of it.

Inside Your Congress

men out on strike this sum could pay strike benefits of $1 a day per member for only 16 days. In lost wages, the strikers will lose this sum every two days the strike lasts.
The public, from President Truman and Congress on down, is weary of strikes. In the five years, 1940 through 1944, which includes three war years, when there were to be no strikes, there were 6,425
more strikes than in the five years 1919-1923 when there was no war
and no Wagner Act, which, as you will recall, was advertised to end strikes.

With 50 percent of all automobiles now more than 7½ years old;
with 6,000,000 less cars on the road
than in 1941; with the nation's great trucking industry just a step ahead of the sheriff due in part to the high cost of keeping their worn out equipment on the road; with farmers, doctors and others in need of new cars; with a pent-up demand for 12,000,000 new cars and production this year of only 250,000 cars, or one-half the expected number; with strikes cutting down national income and federal taxes and therefore increasing the public debt; and adding to the fires of inflation; with men returning from war wanting jobs in factories and sales rooms, the one thing we don't need is a strike in our biggest and most job-promising industry. A prolonged shut-down of the auto industry will affect adversely 30,000
other companies producing parts and raw materials and their hundreds of thousands of employees, who will view the shut-down with disfavor.

With a male-headed gallantry greater than the courtly duellists of a century ago, the strike leaders seem to have given their opponents the choice not only of weapons
but of the time, place and witnesses.

It is far more important right now that the number of jobs should be rapidly increased than that the wages of those who have enjoyed the highest pay in history be raised another 20 percent. Until we have fulfilled our obligations to the boys coming off the troop ships, have we
the moral right to stop the production of things needed by millions?

And after all, what better guarantee of good pay is there than good business?

ARE YOU A BEAR
THREE DAYS A MONTH?
Why let "monthly grumps" make you miserable—and everyone about you? Maybe they are not necessary. Thousands of girls and women have discovered that functional periodic pains usually are greatly relieved when they take Chi-Chesters Pills at the time their period is expected.
Taken according to directions, preferably two or three days before your time, they tend to relax
the muscular contractions that have been found to cause pain, cramps, headaches and nervousness at such periods. An added iron ingredient in Chi-Ches-Ters Pills helps to promote redness and energy. Be sure to ask your druggist for Chi-Ches-Ters Pills, and accept no substitute.
Caution: Use only as directed.

TRUMAN'S LABOR PLAN

proposals are no more than a "stall" to head off much more drastic legislation which might be passed in Congress. Such a result would be unfortunate.

The President cannot by any means be said in his message to have acknowledged his own responsibility for the present deadlock, or his duty to take a firm stand in the present deadlock, or on his duty to take a firm stand ending it.

The crisis goes back directly to the White House. It was the President and his cabinet who told labor this was the time to demand labor wage increases, and at the same moment made such raises economically impossible by freezing prices.

This has smelled from the outset like a bureaucratic plot to throw private industry under government control by making it dependent on subsidies to keep in operation.

Neither labor nor management, and certainly not the general public, may be said to have been fairly dealt with

by the President in this matter.

Labor was encouraged to demand wages under conditions when they were almost certain to be refused. Management was told bluntly that it would have to refrain from adding the new wage-costs to the old prices.

The public, urgently demanding prompt reconversion to badly-needed civilian goods, and calling also for a quick re-establishment of the principles of free economy, has been denied both.

Instead, we have had vacillation and uncertainty in the White House, combined with half-hidden projects to overthrow our entire economic set-up.

Now the President has said his piece. The next move is up to Congress.

Marriage Licenses Show Big Increase

Members were to veterans in the service or to those who have recently been discharged.

Applicants who received the November marriage licenses came from eight States in addition to Pennsylvania. Nearly 70 per cent of the applicants were non-residents of Bucks county, with Philadelphia applicants being more numerous than other non-residents.

There were thirteen divorcees in the November list, six men and seven women. Disparity in ages was not marked.

Looking into the future Deputy Clerk of Orphans' Court Joseph B. Keating, said this morning: "With the war over, you can look for some real business in our line during 1946. We want to dispose of as many marriage licenses as we did before the war, the medical test and the three-day law. We are going to get back into the 'good business' column."

RYVAL TO MY HEART

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

Gail sat and looked around her small, simple and empty office. She looked at her diplomas, framed in neat black. Gail Benton, M.D. . . . She leaned back in her chair. Her shoulders and neck were tense. Her hands were cold. The clock ticked on. Four-fifteen. These are my patients?

She looked down at her hands, white, long-fingered, with narrow, capable wrists. Competent hands, weren't they? They'd saved lives, they'd offered succor from pain and diseases. But . . . what were people saying?

Sure, women make pretty good medical students—but have you seen the way they behave in an emergency? Look at Gail Benton. She's a good example. All right in routine stuff, but give her an exceptional case and she makes a mess of it.

How did the story travel so quickly? Who spread it?

The town had heard rumors of the trial, of the challenge back of it, the challenge to Dr. Cassius McCormick's reign.

And then, to the town's astonishment, the suit was called off settled out of court. What happened? Was McCormick backing down?

No. It was young Dr. Benton who'd made the error!

The gossip rolled like a ball of fire, among Gail's patients, old and new; scorching not them, but her reputation.

Katie, her fuzzy hair piled high, the light of battle in her face, cried indignantly, "What're they tryin' to do! Put you behind the eight ball? You know what—I bet that old doctor's back of it."

"No, Katie," Gail answered soberly. "Doctor McCormick is a hard man but he is completely ethical."

Burke called every day. "They're ganging up on you," he reported morosely. "Some of mother's friends at the Women's Club wanted to know how you became Health Officer at Springdale."

"Oh, it was a mere political plum," Gail answered tartly.

Reyna came every day for the injections Gail was now giving her. Reyna was the only one who was unperturbed.

"I'm alive," Reyna declared robustly, with a twinkle in her small black eyes. "Forget it, my dear."

Gail certainly tried hard enough. And at the end of the first week she'd almost convinced herself that the story would blow over.

During the second week, she realized that several of her patients had not shown up for treatment.

It was then, also, that Amos Niles called her into his office at the hospital. Dr. Ralph Kramer was with him, sitting in a chair near the window.

Gail held her head high, and a faint smile played around her curving lips.

"You wanted to see me, Mr. Niles?"

"Yes, Doctor Benton." He didn't ask her to sit down. He took off his rimless glasses and wiped them with a large handkerchief, making a rite of the task. "I have something to say to you. It is important. And at the same time, it is, regrettably, very delicate."

She was conscious of Kramer's dark face, his slanting birdlike eyes, his faint smirk on his heavy mouth. "I am listening," she said coldly.

"I began pedantically, 'I feel that it would be both feasible and diplomatic, Doctor Benton, if you were to take a vacation from the clinics. Shall we say a leave of absence?'"

"I understand," she said, "and of course, there is nothing I can do about it. But I'd like to know who is back of it, who is kicking me out."

"Your words are impulsive and ill chosen," Niles said suavely. "It is unfortunate that this incident happened," but since it has, we've decided that it would be best that you drop out of the hospital. It is for your own good, Doctor Benton."

"Of course," Gail said sarcastically.

"I think Doctor McCormick has been very tolerant about this," Ralph Kramer observed. "Another man might have been vindictive."

"Please, Ralph," she protested wearily, "you needn't start that."

Gail left the room, and Dr. Kramer followed her. "Well, Joan of Arc—" he drawled, with what for him passed as humor.

"Don't be a fool!" she snapped.

"Tut-tut, Gail," he said. "After all, in a month or so, I'll be a second cousin of yours."

"And bad cess to you!" she exclaimed angrily, walking out to her car.

Gail was furious. Then suddenly, she was aware of a chilling fright. They had ganged up on her, Dr. McCormick, Amos Niles, Ralph—all of the smug, righteous men. It would be a fight. But how could she fight them all? She felt alone, desolate and defenseless.

If only Steve McCormick were here! Steve was the sort of person who turned to in trouble. He had tolerance and sympathy, and understanding.

But Steve had been called to New York. He told her that it had something to do with his enlistment; he would return, he promised, at the earliest possible moment. "Wire if you need me," he said, "and I'll come hopping."

Burke, surprisingly enough, was a great help. He tried to help her forget her troubles. Knowing that she was lonely and reluctant to be by herself, he made it a practice to drop in every evening. Often they dined together; at least twice a week, they went to the movies or a concert.

Burke was funny. Once in a while, he'd scold her unmercifully, but he would knock down anyone who'd say a word about her. He had meant to subpoena her as a witness in court, but privately, he was doing his best to make her happy.

"If I try hard enough to get through the next weeks," she thought, "things will ease . . ."

Gail didn't believe things could get worse, but they did. The news of her absence from the clinics crossed the town like forked lightning. Her private practice was cut in half, then down to a third.

The result was that she sat in her deserted office this fine October afternoon, waiting for the ring of the bell and looking worriedly at her checkbook. Her balance was alarmingly low.

She went over to her file and leafed through it. Full of "free" patients. Still in the last two years, more of the town's middle-class people had been coming to her.

"I must collect some money," she thought, "Katie's salary is due her."

She picked up her courage as well as the telephone and rang one, Rolly, at his office.

"I'm sorry to bother you, Mr. Rolly—" Her mouth was dry, her voice seemed to crack.

"Yes, doctor?"

"I've been thinking about that uncomfortable, that she knew immediately his wife had discussed her. . . . That woman doctor—you know she's no good. Doc McCormick banned her from the hospital."

"About my bill, Mr. Rolly," she said hesitantly. "I wonder if you could send me something on account?"

"I'll speak to Mrs. Rolly about it," he said brusquely.

She hung up filled with shame and a feeling of inadequacy. The world was crashing down about her ears. Gail had one out, of course. She had Burke Gentry, although they were still keeping their engagement a secret.

Burke had been grand during this mess. He'd said, "You can fight to keep your practice if you want to. But if you take my advice, sweet, you'll plan to retire soon after we're married."

"But I can't do that," she protested. "I just can't, Burke!"

"Okay," he said tolerantly. "Do what you think best, and I'll stand by you."

There was a rap on the door. Katie marched in, and the floor seemed to shake with her ponderous step.

"You got patients waiting," she announced glumly. "The kind that don't pay."

"Who is it?"

"That little Eytalian kid you always take cookies to . . . and her ma."

"Oh, show them in." She had not seen little Nina since the afternoon the child's father had forbidden her to visit the dingy flat again.

Our father in heaven, the true and holy one of the universe, accept the praises of our voices today. Endow us with seraphic tongues of praises that we may give voice to our unutterable love and loyalty to thee. Inspire us in song and prayer. Quicken our hesitant spirits to renewed heights of fruitful faith and trust. As we possess more of thy holy spirit use us to bring others to thee. In Jesus' name. Amen.

No gasoline, regardless of price, can match the Incomparable Smoothness of SUNOCO DYNAFUEL

THE NEW ALL-PETROLEUM WONDER FUEL

AND HERE'S THE REASON!

ALL gasolines (including Sunoco Dynafuel) are composed of "light" and "heavy" molecules. As the gasoline goes into the cylinders from the carburetor, some of the "heavy" molecules separate from the rest of the gasoline and go to certain cylinders which get most of the "heavy" molecules while other cylinders get mostly "light" molecules.

ORDINARY GASOLINE

HIGH OCTANE MOLECULES
LOW OCTANE MOLECULES

IN ORDINARY GASOLINE the "heavy" molecules are low in octane quality... but the "light" molecules are high octane. The cylinders receiving the low grade "heavy" molecules do not receive the same high knockless quality as other cylinders.

SUNOCO DYNAFUEL

ALL MOLECULES ARE HIGH OCTANE QUALITY

IN SUNOCO DYNAFUEL, all molecules, both "heavy" and "light" deliver equally high octane power. No matter whether a cylinder receives "light" or "heavy" molecules, that cylinder and all cylinders receive uniformly high knockless quality.

DYNAFUEL'S UNIFORM POWER IN EVERY CYLINDER GIVES YOU A SWEETER-RUNNING CAR

No extra-priced gasoline can excel its QUICK STARTING · FAST ACCELERATION · LONG MILEAGE UNIQUE SMOOTHNESS · HIGH KNOCKLESS POWER

High-test performance without "high-test" price!
